Parting Words and Tough Questions by Rabbi Daniel Goldfarb, Coordinator, Torah Sparks, the Conservative Yeshiva, Jerusalem

This Shabbat we begin Sefer Dvarim, Deuteronomy, the last book of the Torah. Sefer Dvarim records Moses' words to the children of Israel in the weeks before he dies. Moses knows his role is almost over - he has been barred from entering the Land and his successor has been appointed. But this is no farewell speech marked by anecdotes or nostalgia; it is more an "ethical will." Moses recounts the events since leaving Egypt 40 years earlier, reviews legal material the people should know upon entry into Eretz Yisrael, and warns them about the dangers to their faith in God, most particularly from material success and the arrogance that can come from that.

The English name Deuteronomy, "second law," comes from the Septuagint (Greek translation), but it is a mistranslation of the Hebrew mishneh haTorah hazoth, "a copy of this law" (Deut 17:18). The Hebrew name Dvarim is more significant - aleh hadvarim, "these are the words Moses spoke to all Israel..." DBR - "to speak, word/s" is a key root, in the Torah and in the story of Moses. It recalls Moses some 40 years ago, when God first summoned him for a "job interview" at the burning bush, and Moses tried every way he could to avoid the task, including "lo ish dvarim anochi, I am not a person of words (a good speaker) (Ex 4:10)." To paraphrase the old Virginia Slims commercial, "You've come a long way, Moses." He has indeed become a person of words and Dvarim is a book of his words.

The prophet Jeremiah, whose connection to this Shabbat we will soon see, had a similar reaction - in content and language - when God first informed him that he was designated to be "a prophet unto the nations." Henei lo yadati daber - "I don't know how to speak" (Jer 1:6).

Parshat Dvarim is read traditionally on the Shabbat before Tisha B'Av, the day that commemorates the destruction of the First and Second Temples. Parshat Dvarim and Tisha b'Av are connected verbally by the word eicha, "How, alas" in the sense of lament. Eicha is the Hebrew title and first word of Lamentations, in which the prophet Jeremiah grieves over the destruction of the Temple. And in line 12 of the first chapter of our Parsha, Moses laments that the burden of leading the children of Israel has become too much for him - Eicha esah levadi - "How can I bear alone your trouble, burden and bickering?" This verse is traditionally read in the sad, plaintive cantillation of Eicha/Lamentations on Tisha b'Av. But the choice of the word eicha, how, rather than madu'a, why, is significant. The Jewish response to trouble and tragedy can be philosophical - Why does this happen to us? Or it can be practical - How do we deal with it?

The work eicha recalls a word written the same way (without vowels) in Genesis 3:9 - Ayecha? "Where are you?" God calls to Adam in the Garden of Eden after he and Eve have eaten from the forbidden Tree of Knowledge. The question is no less apt today. Where are WE, we must ask ourselves, as humans and as Jews. We may not have answers to the why questions of life - Why I am like this? Why did this happen? But if we can address the how questions - how do I deal with it? How can I be a better Jew? - then we are more likely to know where we are when God calls us.

SEEMA BAT YEHUDIT

May He who blessed our ancestors and is the source of all healing bless and heal those who are ill. May the Holy One Praised Be He mercifully restore them to vigor and lift the burden of anxiety from their loved ones and friends.

On this (Sabbath, Festival, Judgment or Penitence) day we pray that they be spared further pain. May God grant them health of body and health of spirit and mind. May we speedily be privileged to greet their return to good health by welcoming them once again into our midst. Let us say: Amen.

Anyone wanting to add a name to the list should contact Diane Shalom (216-831-6555 ext. 104 or dianeshalom@bnaijeshurun.org) by Thursday afternoon at the latest for inclusion in that Shabbat's program. We will also pause during the prayer for people to recite additional names from their seats.
