D'var Torah: Meeting & Witnessing

Dr. Stephen Arnoff, Executive Director, Fuchsberg Jerusalem Center

We have just finished Sefer Shemot (Book of Exodus) and its multiple chapters describing the donation of raw materials and the building of the Mishkan (Tabernacle). Sefer Vayikra (Book of Leviticus) marks a change, opening as it does with a calling, a speaking, and a meeting/witnessing.

The opening line is Vayikra el Moshe (and [God] called to Moses), vayidaber Adonai elav (and God spoke to him), m'ohel mo'ed (from the Tent of Meeting). The word "mo'ed" is a complex one. Here it means meeting, but elsewhere it also refers to a festival (we say Moadim L'Simcha during the intermediary days of Sukkot and Pesach). Taking into account both uses, we can understand mo'ed as a regularized meeting of the human and the divine.

Mo'ed also contains the word ed, which means "witness," and not surprisingly the Ohel Mo'ed is also referred to (see Shemot 38:21 and BaMidbar 1:50) as Ohel Ha'Edut, the Tent of the Witnessing/Testimony. Sitting at the center of the Israelite camp, the Mishkan/Ohel Mo'ed/Ohel Ha'Edut holds what is called Ha-edut (the Testimony), literally the tablets on which the Ten Commandments were written-the sign/record of the covenant between God and Israel.

Combining all of these elements, we can learn that the regular meeting of human and divine bears witness to the specialness of their relationship; it is a re-enactment of the ultimate meeting of the human and divine at Sinai that brought forth Torah.

Viewed this way, one might literally call the Torah "the Witnessing." And the Israelites witnessed so much-the birth of the Jewish people going out of Israel, the revelation at Sinai, and ultimately coming into the Promised Land. On Passover, when we are asked to imagine ourselves as if we ourselves are Israelites freed from bondage, we are asked to witness what they have seen and felt as the most meaningful way of understanding the Jewish story.

So too today is an age of witnessing. Think of the #metoo movement or the struggle to understand how best to witness the strife of Dreamers in the United States or asylum seekers in Israel-all people crying out for their stories to be heard and compassionate solutions to their struggles to be found. Perhaps most poignantly in the United States, we watch with a mix of broken hearts and pride as teenagers-among them many USYers-demand witness around issues of gun control.

And what does it mean to witness? A closer look at the root of edut reveals a possible link with the word ad, which means, among other things, "up to" or "until." Edut is something like a threshold, a knowledge full to the point of bursting. It's the transfer point, the transom, the place of crossing over. Maybe this is why Jewish thresholds contain a mezzuzah with a protective holy text for moments of transition. The text serves as sign of witness for us.

In ancient Greek the word for "witnessing" can be translated as "martyrdom." Sadly, Judaism has a long history of martyrs, but to pass the threshold of life to death is considered a choice of last resort. The ultimate Jewish value is to "choose life," not to die for a cause. Indeed, in our age of witnessing, asylum seekers, victims of sexual abuse, and teen survivors of gun violence are refusing to be martyrs. They are raising their voices as individuals so that the community will witness them. Their very lives depend upon it. To live is to witness, and one can never be a witness alone.

For Discussion: What kinds of relationships require us to show up, regularly, as a kind of testimony to their specialness? What larger issues in society do you feel are pulling you personally to "show up" and bear witness?

Parashat Vayikra Self-Study

Vered Hollander-Goldfarb, Conservative Yeshiva Faculty

We are starting the third book of the Torah - Vayikra. Our parasha deals with korbanot (sacrifices) of various types, from various sources, and for various reasons.

- 1) The first two parashot of the book of Vayikra teach about Korbanot. How does that connect to the end of the book of Shemot, which we finished reading last week?
- 2) In an unusual opening, we are not only told that God spoke to Moshe, but also that He called to Moshe (Vayikra 1:1). What might this experience have been like for Moshe? (Consider how this might be different from a call by a human being, what the physical and emotional feeling might be like.)
- 3) Should a person bring a korban (sacrifice), he (or she) is not the only human involved in the process (1:3-9). Who else is involved? Why do you think that there was no option given to allow a person to do all the aspects of the korban by himself?
- 4) When the animal to be used as korban is described, the word tamim - whole, is often used to denote a blemish free animal (1:3,10, 3:1,6, 4:3,23,28,32). Why do you think that the Torah stresses this aspect of the animal?
- 5) While a person may need to bring a korban, he/she may not be able to afford to bring a large animal, such as a goat. What can he/she bring instead (5:7)? Why do you think that the Torah did not go the extra step and absolve him from bringing a physical korban?

We welcome your children in the Main Sanctuary!

May He who blessed our ancestors and is the source of all healing bless and heal those who are ill. May the Holy One Praised Be He mercifully restore them to vigor and lift the burden of anxiety from their loved ones and friends.

On this (Sabbath, Festival, Judgment or Penitence) day we pray that they be spared further pain. May God grant them health of body and health of spirit and mind. May we speedily be privileged to greet their return to good health by welcoming them once again into our midst. Let us say: Amen.

Anyone wanting to add a name to the list should contact Diane Shalom (216-831-6555 ext. 104 or dianeshalom@bnaijeshurun.org) by Thursday afternoon at the latest for inclusion in that Shabbat's program. We will also pause during the prayer for people to recite additional names from their seats.
