What's Shmita have to do with Mount Sinai?

Rabbi Daniel Goldfarb, Conservative Yeshiva Faculty/Torah Sparks Coord.

"And the Lord spoke to Moshe at Har Sinai," Parshat Behar begins, enumerating the laws of shmita, the release of the land every seven years. That sounds quite simple, but Rashi here makes perhaps the most famous of all his comments on the Torah - Mah inyan shmitah etsel Har Sinai? "What is the connection of the laws of shmita to Mount Sinai?" Rashi's comment has become a coin of Hebrew parlance for a non-sequitur, "what does this have to do with that?" But Rashi did not mean it in a casual fashion, and he answers himself - just as the laws and rules about Shmita came from Har Sinai, so did all the mitzvot come from Har Sinai (i.e. from God).

At the risk of sounding presumptuous, I suggest that Rashi's question might be better than his answer. The book Vayikra, which we finish this Shabbat, begins 9 months after the revelation at Mount Sinai. Vayikra opens with God speaking to Moshe me'ohel mo'ed, at the Tent of Meeting (the Tabernacle) which the children of Israel built at the end of the book of Shmot (Exodus). So Rashi is calling attention to a discrepancy of time/place in the text - why does the Torah note that the shmita laws were given at a location the people had left almost a year earlier? But he himself does not address this chronological issue.

Ibn Ezra (12th Spain) does. He says shmita was actually told before what's told in Vayikra, and that this verse shows that events in the Torah are not told in chronological order (ein mukdam u'me'uchar b'torah), a matter about which the commentators have heated debates. Rashbam (12th C, Ashkenaz, Rashi's grandson) agrees, it was given "before the Tent of Meeting was erected." These commentators focus on the literal meaning of the text in the verses which mention locations when God speaks.

Rashi, who said (in his comment on Gen 3:8) that he was just explaining "the simple meaning of the text" (v'ani lo bati eleh l'pshuto shel mikra - sounds like "I'm just a country lawyer..."), is commenting here on the level of authority - the Torah was given at Sinai complet, and shmita is the classical example of this. Ramban (Spain 13th century), citing other cases where a law was given expressly at Sinai and then expanded on later, takes sharp issue with Rashi on this. After quoting Rashi's comment in full, he says v'eino nachon b'ainai clal - "I think this is all wrong." I'll suggest two possible reasons for Rashi's focus on the ideological importance. Historically, since Rabbinic times, the rabbis have had to deal with factions which denied the Divine authority of Torah sh'bichtav, the Oral Torah. The Pharisees, our rabbinic ancestors, were challenged by the Sadducees on this issue, and the Karaites claimed that only the Written Torah was authoritative, with significant success in the Middle Ages, so Rashi comment here could be related to that.

Yehuda Nachshoni, a Torah commentator in the 20th Century (Studies in the Weekly Parashah) says Rashi's choice of shmita as the classic example of the essential character of the Divine Revelation to Moses at Sinai is conceptual and tied to the special character of Shmita. Shmita, he says, was revolutionary - it introduces to the world the concepts of tikun olam, social equality, and faith and confidence in God. In Nachshoni's view, there is no other mitsva as "value packed" as shmita, and this is why Rashi chose it. Nothing better represents the Sinai legacy.

Table Talk by Vered Hollander-Goldfarb, Conservative Yeshiva Faculty

This week is yet another double Parasha that will bring us to the end of the book of Vayikra. The Parasha begins with laws pertaining to the land. Then we read about the rewards that we will receive if we observe the Mitzvot and the horrors that will befall our people if we fail to observe them.

1) Every 7th year is a year when we may not work the land [of Israel]. What does the Torah call this year (25:1-7)? What does it have in common with a day that goes by a very similar title? What do both come to teach us?

2) Land that is sold [in the land of Israel] is done so temporarily, until the 50th, Jubilee (Yovel), year. What happens to the land at that point (25:13)? What message does it teach us about land as a human possession?

3) Should a fellow person become poor and borrow from us, we are restricted in what we can demand for providing financial help (25:35-36). Why do you think that the Torah put on this restriction? How does the Torah want us to view the person to whom we lend (notice what he is called)? Why does the Torah remind us here to fear God?

4) The Torah promises rewards for keeping the Mitzvot (26:3-13). What are the first rewards that we are told that we will receive (vv.3-5)? Why do you think that the Torah opened with these? Do you think that this would convince people today? Why?

5) One of the possible penalties for failing to observe the Mitzvot (26:14-44) is exile from the land. What will be (one of) the results of exile (vv.33-35)? Why might exile seem to be an appropriate punishment for not observing this Mitzvah?

Kiddush or Oneg Sponsorships

The mitzvah of a donation for sponsorship of a kiddush or oneg is a beautiful way to share the happiness of your milestone or remember a loved one with the congregation. Sponsorships are acknowledged in the Shabbat handout and in Tidings. The cost of a kiddush is $500 and an oneg is $250; partial sponsorships are available and they are tax deductible. May He who blessed our ancestors and is the source of all healing bless and heal those who are ill. May the Holy One Praised Be He mercifully restore them to vigor and lift the burden of anxiety from their loved ones and friends.

On this (Sabbath, Festival, Judgment or Penitence) day we pray that they be spared further pain. May God grant them health of body and health of spirit and mind. May we speedily be privileged to greet their return to good health by welcoming them once again into our midst. Let us say: Amen.

Anyone wanting to add a name to the list should contact Diane Shalom (216-831-6555 ext. 104 or dianeshalom@bnaijeshurun.org) by Thursday afternoon at the latest for inclusion in that Shabbat's program. We will also pause during the prayer for people to recite additional names from their seats.
